His speech made the Re-publicans hilarious, and they greeted his platitudes with half-stiffed and derisive laughter. One un-fortunate statement he made was that in 1830 the Washington, July 7.—Representative Marcus C. Lisle, of the Xth Kentucky District, died at his home at Winchester, Ky., last night. Mr. Lisle had been ill for several months with a complication of consumption and Bright's disease. He returned to Kentucky a month ago in 20 precarious a condition that his recovery was not expected. Democrats recognized not only the necessity but the right of the Republican majority to take the course that the Democratic majority proposed to take to-day. He was undoubtedly grieved and mortitake to-day. He was undoubtedly grieved and mortified after he sat down and Mr. Burrows rose to reply. He had armed hiraself with a copy of the official report of the debate on September 15, 1856, and read with gusto extracts from the remarks of McMillin, Criap, Turner and McMela in which the proposed "tyranny" of the mcDirity was vehemently denounced. Mr. Burrows then congratulated the Democrats upon their discovery of another abandoned campfire of the Republican party, and quoted with great effect from the remarks of General Garfield on that subject when he was a member of the House of Representatives. This peroration aroused the Republicans to a high pitch of enthusiasm and he was rewarded with round after round of hearty applituse. It is seldom, indeed, that so effective a rejoinder is heard in the House of Representatives, and Mr. Burrows richly deserved the applause that he received. Mr. Lie was serving his first term in Congress, and was the youngest member of the House, being not yet thirty-two years old. He was born on Sentember 2, 1862, in Clark County, Kyl. and was educated in the common schools and Kentucky University. He studied law at the Columbia College Law School, in this city, and was admitted to the bar in 1887. In 1890 he was elected County Judge of Clark County, and in 1862 was elected as a Democrat to the Liftid Congress.

Order first, other things afterward in their due course. Organized labor may be a question, but it is not a war question, and it will not become a question at all until this war is put down. The Pullman quarrel may be a question, but it is not a war question and it will not be allowed to make or produce or perpetuate a condition of war in the United States. Arbitration or no arbitration may be a question, but it will be a question hereafter—"when has cruel war is over"—and not before. emergency it will cease to be a government in this crerything but name, and the country will be delivered ever, to despotism more absolute than any in Europe, since it will be a despotism of ignorance and passion. We need nurse no delusions in this connection. The question is one of civilization or barbarism, of taw or license, of peace or rapine, of order or Anarchy. There is nothing to arbitrate or to discuss. If it takes the winde United States Army, in addition to all the State militia, to bring order out of the mob rule in Chicago, order must be had. And men who get in the way of the American people when they set out to compel observance of the laws which taey have set up, must take the consequences.

A CHIMERA OF THE BOOKMEN. Mr. Reed, who followed, spoke in a vein of keen and cutting sarcasm, and when he sat down there was a genuine sigh of relief on the Democratic side. He said he appreciated "the difficulties" which environed tariff legislation in the Senate, and realized that it would be painful for the gentleman from West Virginia to describe and explain them. He ridiculed the phrase "free raw materials" which Mr. Wilson had denominated "a fundamental principle of the Democratic party," and said that it was quietly remarked that he received this "tribute of Democratic abuse" with equanimity. He rose, he said, to offer a plea in behalf of the industries of the Empire State, the extent and importance of which he set forth most effectively. The only New-York Democrat in elther branch of Congress who had succeeded in saving a single one of these industries was Senator Edward Murphy, jr., of Troy. "When the Wilson bill went to the Senate," said Mr. Quieg, "it was a bill to protect trusts." This apt and happy hit was rewarded with applause. Mr. Quieg next proceeded to describe and explain in a mest lucid manner the nature of "the difficulties" which surrounded tariff legislation in the Senate, and the manner in which they had been overcome.

Capital speeches on the Republican side were also delivered by Mr. Dalzell, who read Senator Hill's description and analysis of the bill as it passed the Senate, and by Mr. Cannen, of Illinois, who indulged in a prophecy which must have been the reverse of encouraging to the Democrats.

Chairman Wilson was the only Democrat who spoke. He yielded five minutes to Mr. Pence (Populist), of Colorado, who consumed most of the time in reading from the Omaha platform extracts in which both the Republican and Democratic parties were bitterly denounced. This was done apparently to show that since the Democratic party had repented—had abandoned its own platform and crawled upon the Populist platform—its political sins had been forgiven. NO DIVISION ON NON-CONCURRENCE.

CHAIRMAN WILSON'S LABORED SPEECH Chairman Wilson, who opened the debate on the motion to non-concur in all the Senate "amendments," began by saying that the warm approval of the Republican leaders emboldened him to ask that the motion be adopted by unanimous consent, but Mr. Reed thought it would be better to have some debate. There is no doubt that Chairman Wil-

Senator Harris may have added to his embarrassment.

"It has been sometimes said," he began, "that the bill passed by the House on February I was not a well-considered measure." This proposition he denied with considerable heat, and went on to explain how much time, and thought, and care, etc., had been bestowed upon it. The bill, he declare. "was based upon two clear and fundamental principles of the Democratic party—free raw materials and the substitution of ad valorem rates of duty for specific rates, and the false and fraudulent system of compound rates." Both these great "fundamental principles of the Democratic party" the Senate had not only blated, but repudiated, in a burst of indignant soquence he declared that "the House must insist" upon its adherence to these "fundamental principles." and was rewarded with a round of hearty Democratic applause. "It is the duty of the House to stand by the people, and I believe it will," was another dramatic exclamatich which excited hearty Democratic applause for chairman Wilson. In closing he uttered a remark walen was made a text by several Republicans who followed him. After saying that, after all, the Senate was entitled to its opinions and the benefit of a "fud and free conference," he added:

"We should recognize the difficulties which surround the bill in the Senate."

"What difficulties?" asked Mr. Reed, in a flash, Chairman Wilson sank into his seat without making any response to this pertinent inquiry.
